

Todd E. Jones

Todd Jones is a member of Taylor English's Litigation & Dispute Resolution practice group, focusing on intellectual property and other commercial disputes. Mr. Jones has handled to successful resolution cases involving patents, trademarks, copyrights, trade secrets, restrictive covenants, false advertising, computer software, and e-commerce issues, as well as all manner of contract disputes.

Mr. Jones also has experience with class actions, shareholder and partnership disputes, RICO Act claims, real estate disputes, and defamation claims, and he has participated in various forms of alternative dispute resolution. He also was a critical part of a team that serviced a Fortune 100 company in its groundbreaking National Discovery Counsel program. In addition, he has drafted and advised clients on restrictive covenants, technology/intellectual property license agreements, and other contracts.

Prior to joining Taylor English, from 1984 – 2006 Mr. Jones practiced law at Powell Goldstein, LLP, one of Atlanta's oldest and largest law firms, where he was a partner. He is married and has three children. In his spare time he enjoys coaching sports, writing, and playing an occasional round of high-handicap golf.
